building along with the land could be acquired only in April 1989. The building needed extensive modifications and civil works to suit the requirements of the Coast Guard. The delay was farther aggravated due to non-availability of acid tiles and the need for modification of trusses. As a result, the civil works could be completed only by March 1993. The building was taken over by Coast Guard in July, 1993.

(c) Since Coast Guard has no repair yard of its own, repair and maintenance of Coast Guard Vessels is done at public sector and commercial shipyards on a competitive basis.
